

K. Funeral Processions

Vehicles driven in a funeral procession must have headlights turned on and hazard lights flashing in order to be granted the right-of-way.

A vehicle driven in a funeral procession facing a red signal may continue through or make a turn at an intersection.

Other vehicles, even if they have a green signal, must yield the right-of-way to the vehicles in the funeral procession until all vehicles in the procession have passed, unless they can safely proceed without crossing the path of the procession.

L. Slow Moving Vehicles

You may encounter slow moving vehicles on the roadways, including bicycles, horse-drawn vehicles, and farm vehicles. Some of these vehicles may have the slow-moving emblem (shown) on the back of the vehicle to help warn you they are only going 25 mph or less.

- Be constantly aware of any vehicles that might be traveling at a much slower speed.
- Adjust the speed and position of your vehicle accordingly.
- Only pass the slow moving vehicle when it is safe to do so.

If you must follow the slower moving vehicle waiting for a safe time to pass, use your emergency flashers to help warn others coming up behind you.
